How To Use WordPress RSS

WordPress Training

This tutorial covers the following:

What is RSS?

Providing high-quality information on your site not only helps to build trust and credibility with your visitors, but it can also help drive more targeted prospects and customers to your business.

For example, if your business provides accounting or financial planning services, you could provide your visitors with the latest news and information from the tax office, such as updates on tax rulings, small business tax deductions, etc.

Similarly, if you provide medical or health-related services, you may want to share information from government health departments, updates on the latest medical research, health and fitness tips, etc.

Or, if you blog about travel-related topics, you may want to post information like travel warnings from foreign governments or consular offices.

Creating this kind of information, however, is time-consuming and requires a huge amount of effort, research, and expertise. You would have to sort through, and filter loads of information, gather and organize a ton of data, check your facts and sources for accuracy, write and edit all of this content, and then continually make sure that this information remains up to date.

Not only would this involve a great deal of work but most of this information is entirely beyond your control and could change at any time.

Fortunately, there is a way to provide your site users with new, expertly written, and up-to-date information on a regular basis.

It's called RSS.

RSS lets online users keep up with the latest content from other websites.

RSS began as an acronym for Rich (or RDF) Site Summary. This later changed to Really Simple Syndication. It is now also called a feed, as in an RSS feed or a news feed.

Why Use RSS?

Before social media came along, the best way to keep up with relevant and interesting content being posted around the internet was to subscribe to an RSS feed.

Instead of visiting your favorite websites several times each day to view their latest content (or keeping open tabs on your browser and constantly having to refresh these), you could just subscribe to their RSS feeds and have it delivered straight into your inbox.

Although social networks have largely taken over, RSS feeds are far from being obsolete. While not as popular as they once were, RSS feeds are still one of the best ways to receive in-depth content from a website, instead of seeing only the content that is being promoted and pushed up on social media.

About RSS Feeds:

- RSS lets content publishers automatically syndicate their content, allowing users to read it without having to keep visiting the site to check for updates.
- Once a user subscribes to a website's RSS feed, they no longer have to manually check the site for content updates. Instead, their browser will continually monitor the site's content feed and keep subscribers automatically updated.
- RSS feeds are often used to publish frequently updated information, such as new blog post entries, news headlines, video, and audio lists, etc.
- RSS feed content can be viewed and read using a web-based, desktop-based, or mobile software called an RSS feed reader, or feed aggregator. Aggregators can be used to combine the content from various sites' feeds.
- An RSS feed is a structured XML (Extensible Markup Language) document that includes full or summarized text along with other metadata, such as the date of publishing, author, etc.
- Feeds allow users to subscribe to content from around the web and publishers to syndicate their content to other sites.
- There are different kinds of feed formats, which can be read by different feed readers and aggregators. Some of these include RSS feeds, Atom feeds (also called AtomPub or APP, which stands for Atom Publishing Protocol, and RDF (Resource Description Framework) feeds. All these formats, however, use a standard XML file format to ensure that feeds remain compatible with different devices and other feed readers or programs.

Who Uses RSS (Really Simple Syndication) Feeds

Content syndication is a powerful and legitimate way to share content online. RSS feeds provide users with a simple and easy way to keep up with the latest information on sites they are interested in.

Many of the world's largest digital content publishers and news reporting agencies rely on content syndication to publish newsworthy articles and keep their readers engaged with their content without having to employ additional writers or reporters to gather stories from around the planet.

The screenshot shows the Reuters website interface. At the top, it says 'EDITION: INTERNATIONAL' and 'REUTERS'. Below the navigation bar, there's a 'WORLD NEWS HEADLINES' section with several articles. The first article is 'UK opens special visa route for Hong Kong residents to become citizens'. Other articles include 'Mexican telecoms magnate Slim returns home after hospitalization with COVID-19', 'UK says it expects no vaccine interruption from EU; Brussels admits Irish 'blunder'', 'Macron defends decision not to order third lockdown as third wave spreads', 'Britain focused on collaboration with EU after vaccine row -minister', 'Guatemalan woman's family urges Mexico to solve killings of 19 suspected migrants', 'U.N. lists candidates to run Libya's transitional government until this year's vote', 'Putin's former judo partner says he owns palace which opposition links to Russian leader', 'Costa Rica sees sailing tourist trade stagnant in 2021 after COVID-19 blow', and 'Lithuanian president nominates Belarus opposition leader for Nobel prize - sources'. To the right of the headlines is a 'POLITICS VIDEO' section featuring a video titled 'COVID relief has to pass: Biden to Congress'.

The screenshot shows the 'World News' section of The New York Times website. The top navigation bar includes 'WORLD NEWS' and 'The New York Times'. Below the navigation, there's a 'World News' section with a grid of articles. The main article is 'Paris, Shuttered, Must be Imagined'. Other articles include 'As Protests Grip Russia, Putin Critics of Many Stripes Rally Around Navalny', 'E.U. Makes a Sudden and Embarrassing U Turn on Vaccines', 'Health Providers Worldwide Welcome Biden Reversal of Anti-Abortion Rule', 'Vaccine Rollout Gives U.K. a Rare Win in the Pandemic', 'U.S. Airstrike Kills Top ISIS Leader in Iraq', 'He Is Israel's 'Prince of Torah,' But to Some, He Is the King of Covid.', 'Tibetan Who Spoke Out for Language Rights Is Freed From Chinese Prison', 'Violence May Delay U.S. Troop Withdrawal From Afghanistan.', and 'A Victory for Farmers in a David-and-Goliath Environmental Case'.

The screenshot shows the 'World' section of The Sydney Morning Herald website. The top navigation bar includes 'The Sydney Morning Herald' and 'World'. Below the navigation, there's a 'World' section with a grid of articles. The main article is 'US slams Chinese flights over South China Sea'. Other articles include 'Dangerous signal: Europe gives itself power to block vaccine shipments to Australia', 'A big welcome from Sherwood: GameStop disruption sends thousands to Britain's Robin Hood Society', and 'Simple is beautiful: single-shot Johnson & Johnson COVID-19 vaccine 66 per cent effective'.

Many of the world's top news sites use content syndication to publish articles for their readers from all around the world.

If you study many of these sites, you will see that their content comes from different news sources like newswire agencies, press release companies, etc.

This content is syndicated and published on their site using news feeds.

Syndicated Content

Syndicated content.

Most websites would like you to syndicate their content. Content syndication not only allows valuable information to be shared but can also drive visitors back to their site through links placed on other websites.

Although not as popular as it once was, many companies still provide visible links on their site to their RSS feeds section.

Typically these will be found in the footer section of their sites. If you can't find it, just search for "name of site/keyword + rss" (e.g. "nytimes rss," "huffington post rss," "daily mail rss," "sydney morning herald rss," etc.) or type "rss" inside the site's search function.

Clicking on an RSS button leads to a page with XML data.

The XML data in the feed page requires a program called a feed reader that can translate this feed code into human-readable content.

To view the content of the feed, either copy the URL of the RSS feed link (or RSS button) and paste it into your feed reader or sign up for a feed reader service that lets you automatically subscribe to the feed (we'll cover this later).

This XML file does not appear to have any style information associated with it. The document tree is shown below.

Benefits Of Using RSS Feeds

Adding someone else's content to your site via an RSS feed can be mutually beneficial.

It not only benefits the other site by giving them additional exposure online but it can also benefit your site by adding value to your site readers without requiring you to create the content.

Content syndication using RSS feeds can be mutually beneficial.

While adding an RSS feed from another site is a great way to add content to your site, it's worth also trying to get other sites to syndicate your content.

When other sites syndicate your content, you also get the opportunity to increase your site's exposure online and gain new visitors.

A WordPress feed page displaying content as XML data.

Can't Find The RSS Feed? Try This:

If you have searched everywhere and can't find the site's RSS feed, try searching for it by inspecting the page's source code in your web browser.

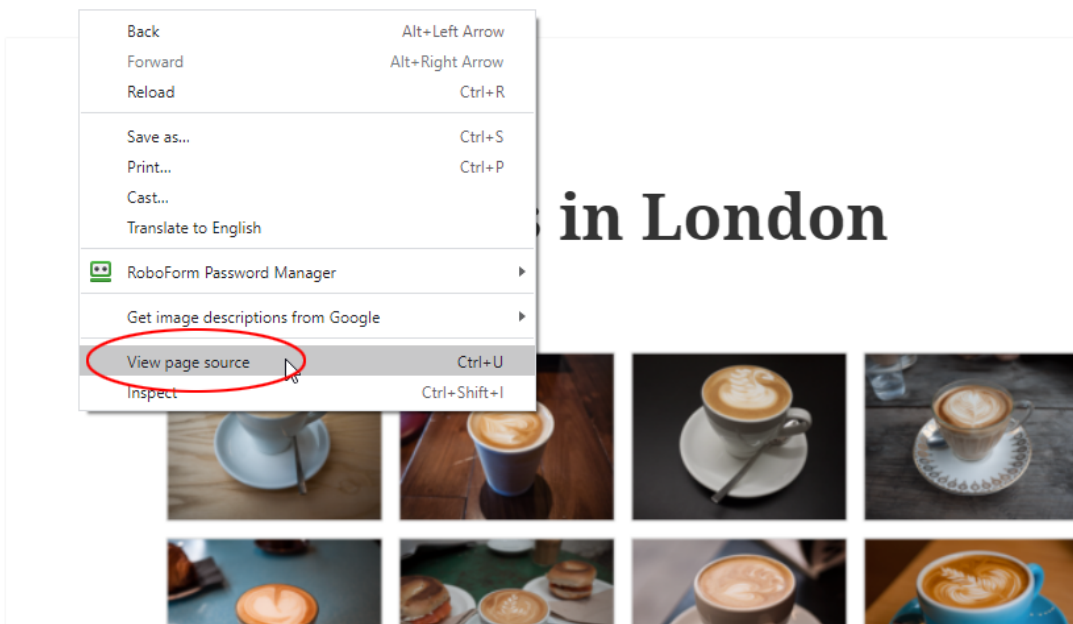

Don't worry...it's easy and requires no coding skills!

Let's show you how to do this. In this example, we'll use Google Chrome.

First, right-click anywhere on the page of the site you want to obtain the feed and select View page source (Windows users = Ctrl+U) ...

Archives: Coffee

Coffee reviews, articles and news by Peter Thomson.

Right-click on the page and select View page source.

Next, go to your browser's settings menu and select Find... (Windows users = Ctrl + F)

Select the Find feature in your browser (Image: Google Chrome)

In the search box, type in “rss”.

All instances of “rss” will be highlighted in the page’s source code. Scroll through the page or use the ‘up and down’ arrows next to the search field to navigate the page until you find the feed URL.

In the screenshot below, the search brings up three results: the site’s main feed, the site’s comments feed, and a category feed. In this example, we were looking for the category feed, so select and copy that URL.

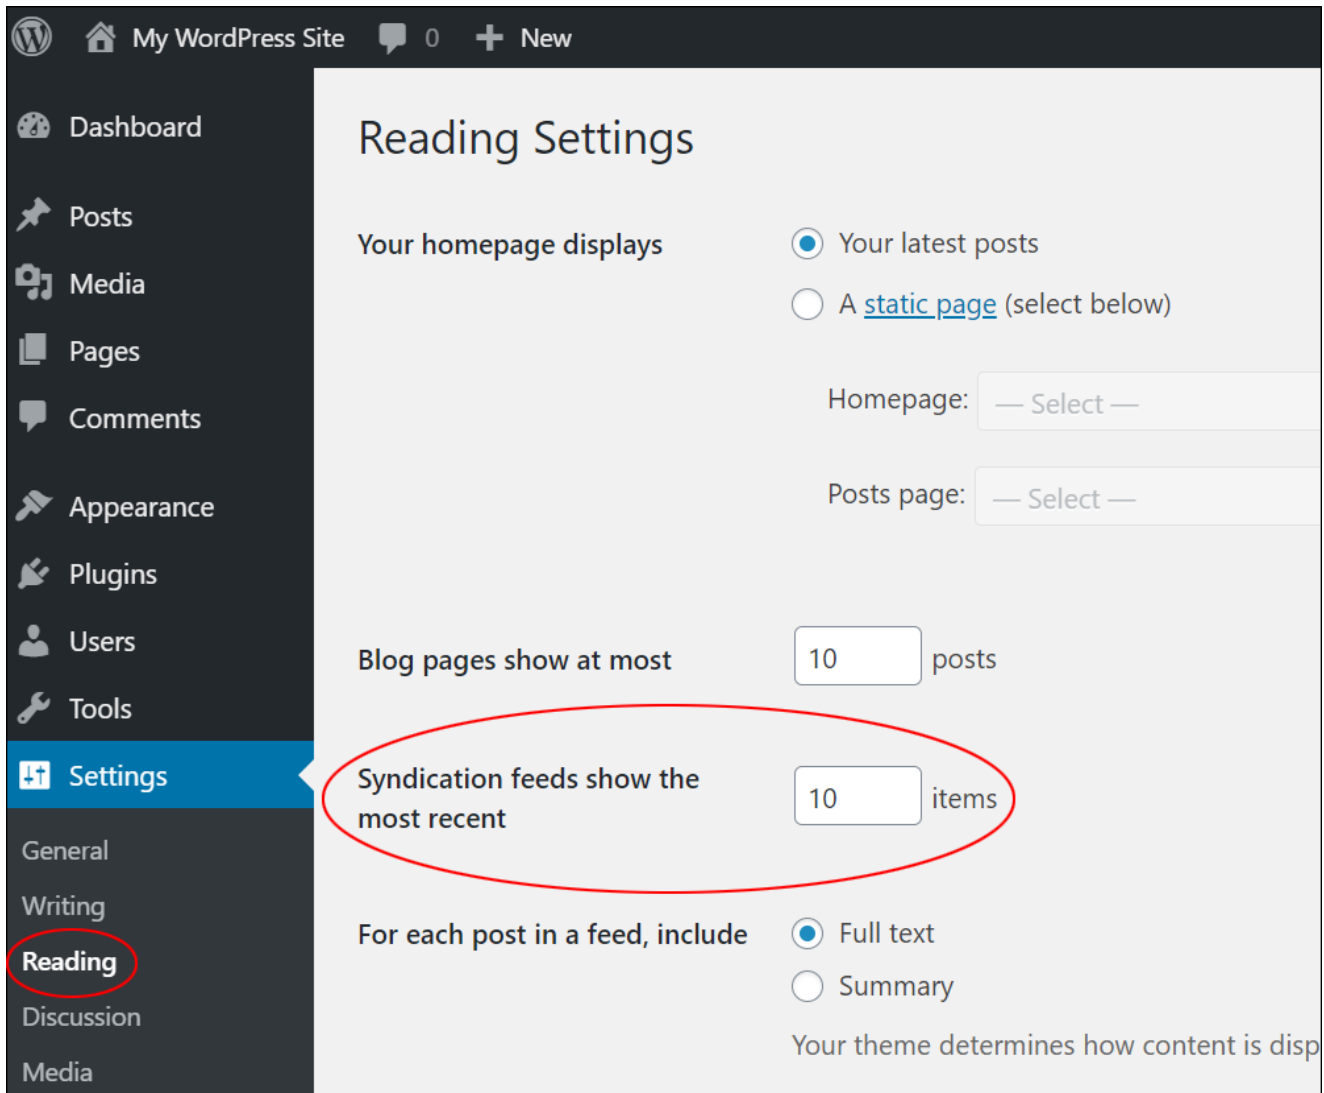

Search for instances of ‘rss’ in your page’s source code.

We’ll cover using feeds for post comments and categories later.

How To Specify The Number Of Items To Display On Your RSS Feed

To specify how many post entries you would like your RSS feed to display, go to Settings > Reading and type in the number of items in the “Syndication feeds show the most recent” field.

Set the number of items to display in your syndication feeds.

Your feed section will display the number of entries you have specified in the Reading Settings section.

For example, here is a feed with 10 items specified...

mywp.site/feed/

sion="1.0" encoding="UTF-8"?><rss version="2.0"

This RSS feed displays only 3 feed entries, as specified in the Reading Settings section.

Display Full Text Or Summary Of Posts In Your RSS Feed

Another setting in the Reading Settings section that affects your RSS feed is whether to display each post in your feed as full text or as a summary.

For each post in a feed, include

Full text

Summary

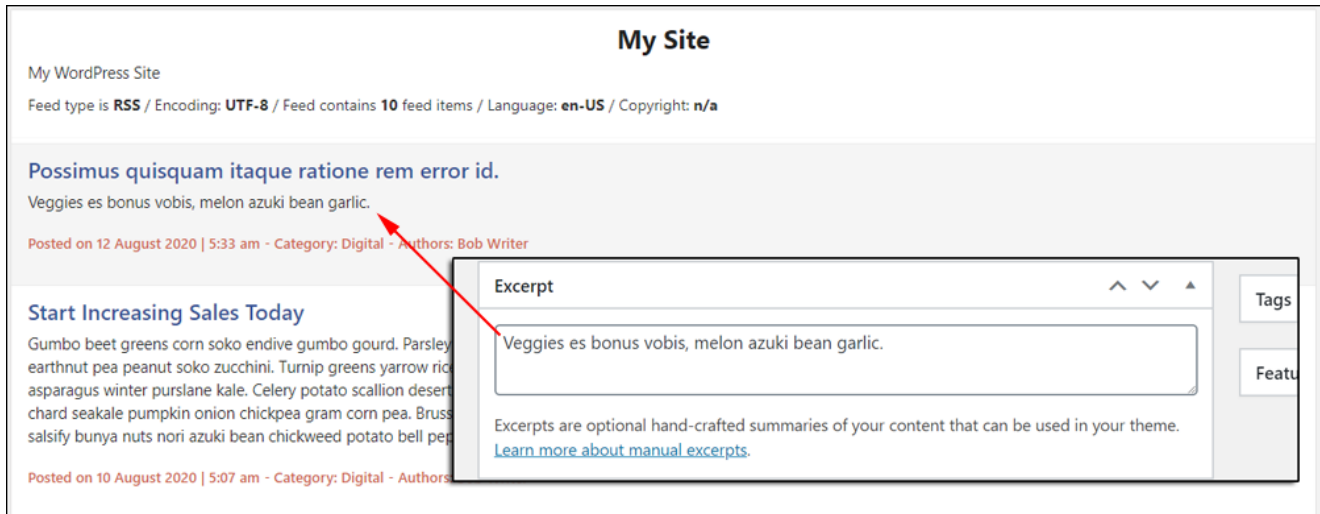

Your theme determines how content is displayed in browsers. Learn more about feeds.

You can display the full text or a summary of your posts in your WordPress RSS feed.

Post Excerpts can also affect how content displays in your feed.

Many themes, for example, will display your post excerpt if you specify feeds to display a post summary instead of the full text.

RSS feeds set to display post summaries can display your post excerpt.

If you need help in this area, see this tutorial: Using Post Excerpts In WordPress

View The Content Of RSS Feeds Using A Feed Reader

To view the content of an RSS feed, simply copy the feed's URL to your clipboard and paste it into a feed reader.

A feed reader is an application that can read and translate feeds containing XML data into human-readable content.

Feed readers let you subscribe to RSS feeds from different websites, blogs, and social media channels.

They will then aggregate the content from the various feeds you have subscribed to, allowing you to stay up to date with the latest posts, articles, and news from your favorite sites, all from one place and across various devices.

Use a free RSS feed reader to view your feed content (Image: NewsBlur).

There are several free RSS feed readers available. For example, check out these:

- Feedly
- Feedreader Online
- Feedroll
- Inoreader
- NewsBlur
- Feeder
- Flowreader
- Good News

You can also install feed readers as web browser extensions.

To view the content of an RSS feed using a feed reader is quite simple:

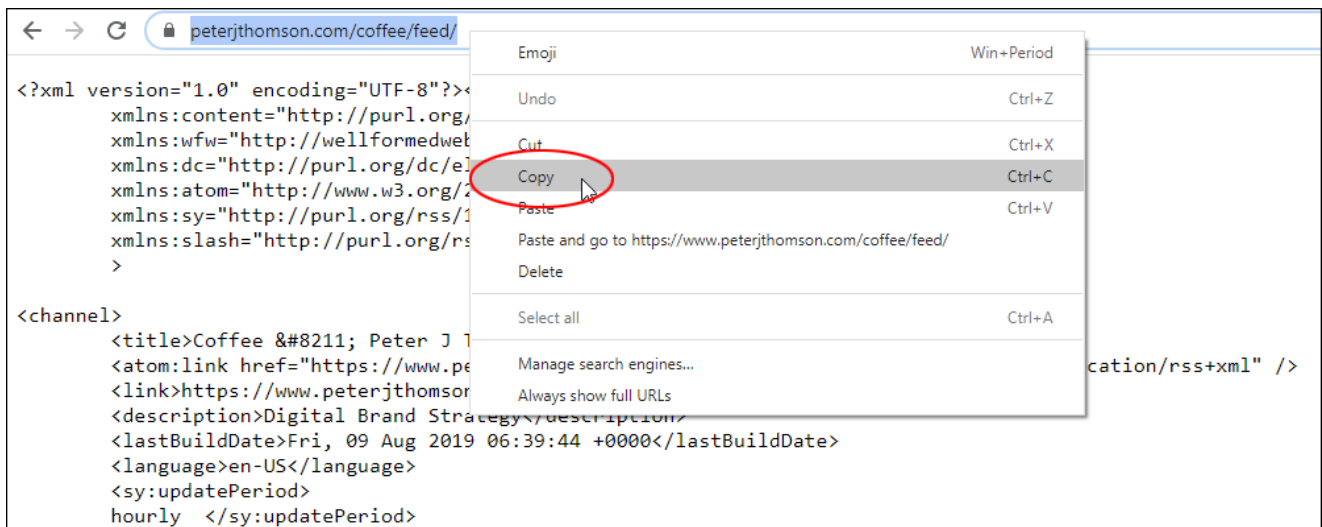

First, find a website or blog that you want to subscribe to and search for their RSS feed using any of the methods described earlier.

Some sites will display an RSS icon, button, or link (e.g. 'subscribe to feed').

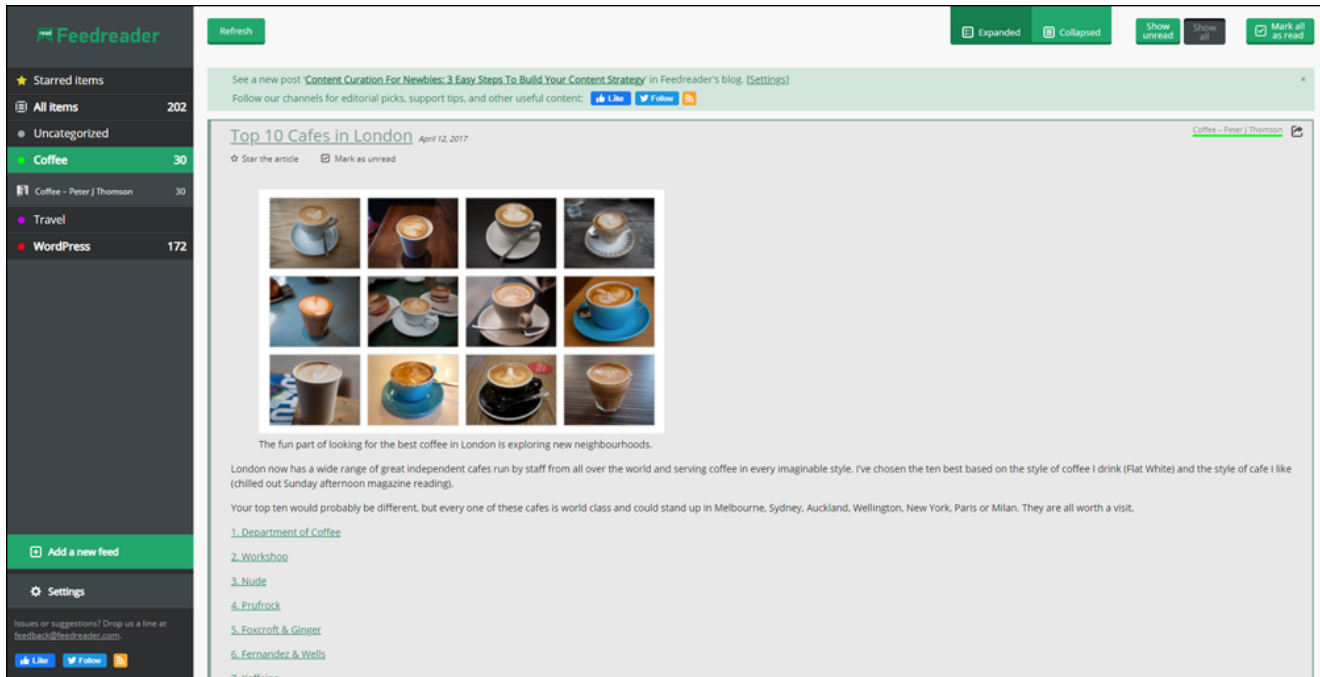

Search for an RSS button or link.

Select the feed's URL, then right-click and copy it to your clipboard.

Copy the feed's URL to your clipboard. (Feed source: peterjthomson.com)

Check your feed content by pasting the URL from your clipboard into your feed reader.

Paste the feed URL into a feed reader to view its content. (Image Feedreader.com)

If you just want to preview what your RSS feed will look like without subscribing to any service, use Feedroll's RSS Viewer.

Enter your feed into the feed validator text field and click the Preview Feed button.

Rss Feed Viewer

You are on Feed Rss Viewer!

Here at Feedroll, we offer services for both RSS users and publishers alike. The details of our services are listed below.

Feedroll is a free service which allows you to pick and choose the very best news RSS feeds on the net, giving your viewers up to date news without leaving your site. In today's every more competitive market place it is essential that you keep viewers on your site, and there is no better way than a constantly updated RSS feed. Choose your favourites, and let us package them together for you in one seamless feed. Let the publisher do the hard work, and give your viewers what they want to see. Our press releases you can also read on the Social Media News Portal.

First, be sure to preview the feed to verify the content and format. Once the content is displayed how you like, just use the generate javascript button to get your code. Once the content looks okay, move on to our style tool to make it pretty.

URL Enter the web address of the RSS Feed (must be in `http://` format, not `feed://`) examples:

- page URL (don't use this)
- RSS feed `http://` version (use this)
- RSS feed `feed://` version (don't use this)

Note: Please verify the URL of your feed (make sure it presents raw RSS) and check that it is valid before using this form.

Show channel? (yes/no/title) Display information about the publisher of the feed (yes=show the title and description; title= display title only, no=do not display anything)

yes title no

Number of items to display. Enter the number of items to be displayed (enter 0 to show all available)

Show/Hide item descriptions? How much? (0=no descriptions; 1=show full description text; n>1 = display first n characters of description; n=-1 do not link item title, just display item contents)

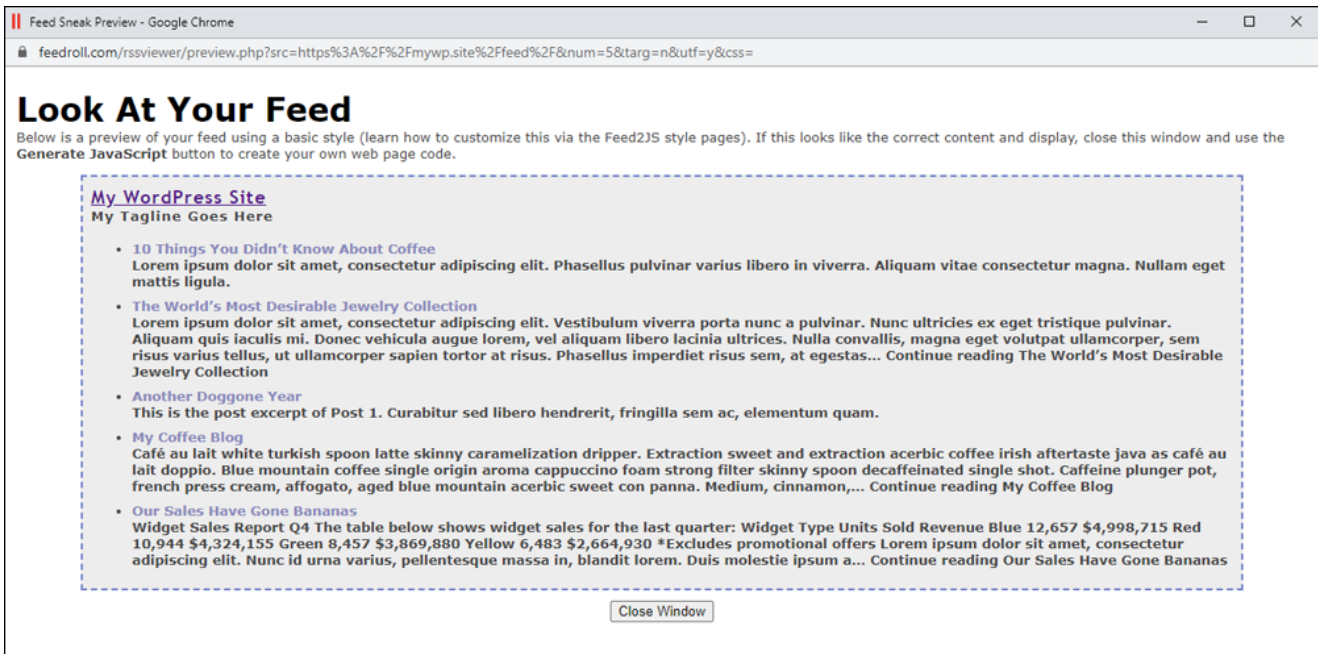

Enter your feed here

Click here

Feedroll's free online RSS Viewer lets you preview your RSS feed.

A feed preview window will pop up showing you what your feed will look like when viewed on your users' feed readers.

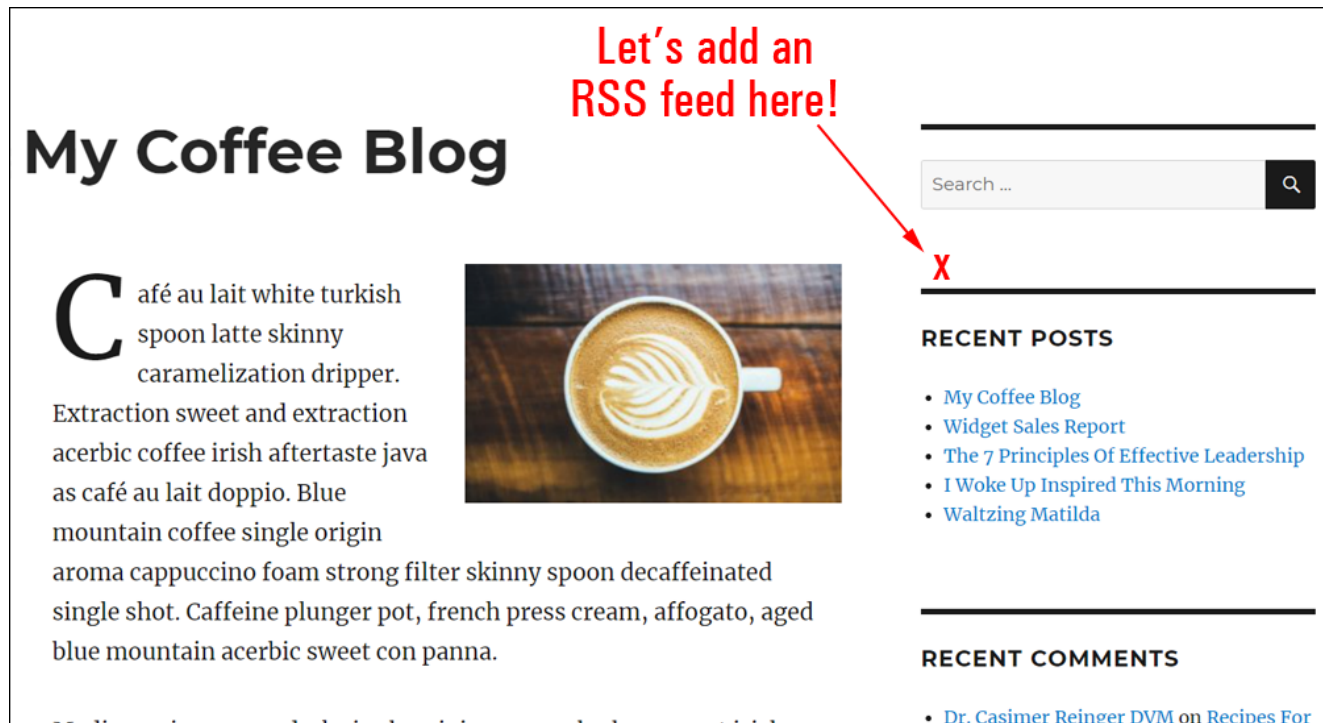

A preview of your feed.

Feedroll's RSS Viewer tool also lets you generate feed code for your web page.

Like feed readers, WordPress can process XML/RSS feeds and convert these into human-readable content for your site visitors.

How To Add RSS Feeds To WordPress

You can easily add RSS feed content from another site to your WordPress sidebar area.

We have created a detailed tutorial covering how to add content from other sites' RSS feeds to the sidebar area of your WordPress site or blog using the WordPress RSS widget here:

How To Add Content From RSS Feeds To WordPress Posts Using Plugins

As discussed in this tutorial, when used with caution, auto blogging tools can automatically gather and compile content from RSS feeds, allowing you to quickly curate and create new content for your site.

So, let's say that you want to add content from an RSS feed to create posts on your site instead of displaying it on your sidebar.

You can easily do this using WordPress plugins.

Just search inside your 'Add Plugins' screen (Plugins > Add New) or the WordPress.org plugin directory for keywords like RSS, RSS feed, RSS Aggregator, RSS feed to post, etc.

Search the WordPress plugins directory for RSS plugins.

Note: Most RSS plugins require configuring. Visit the plugin sites for setup instructions.

Here are some useful plugins you can use to add RSS feed content to posts:

FeedWordPress

FeedWordPress.

FeedWordPress is a simple and flexible RSS syndication plugin for WordPress-generated content.

As stated in the FeedWordPress site...

FeedWordPress is an open-source Atom/RSS aggregator for the WordPress blog publishing platform. You set up feeds that you choose, and FeedWordPress syndicates posts from those sources into your WordPress posts table, where they can be displayed by your WordPress templates like any other post — but with additional meta-data, so that your templates can properly attribute the post to the source it came from.

You can use this plugin to create aggregator sites from different sources or display all of your online activity (e.g. from your blog, Facebook, YouTube, or other online services, into a Lifestream).

Comments feed.

Paste the URL of the RSS comments feed into your favorite feed reader.

View comments posted to your subscribed feeds in your favorite feed reader.

You should now be able to view your comments feed.

View the latest comments on the posts and articles you are subscribed to.

Note: If the Meta section is not displaying on your theme, you can view the Comments RSS section of your site by opening up a browser and typing in the following URL:

- <http://www.yourdomain.com/comments/feed>
- <http://www.yourdomain.com/blog/comments/feed> (if your site has been installed in a subfolder, e.g. “blog”)

Tip #2 – Display Single Post Items

Being able to create an RSS feed for an individual post can be useful. For example, you may want to add feeds from specific posts to RSS aggregator sites, or you may have created a valuable resource that other online users will want to syndicate.

To create an RSS feed for a single post, use the formula shown below:

<https://yourdomain.com/category/post-title/feed/?withoutcomments=1>

RSS feed for a single post.

To create the above feed, copy the URL of your post and add “/feed/?withoutcomments=1” to the end of the URL.

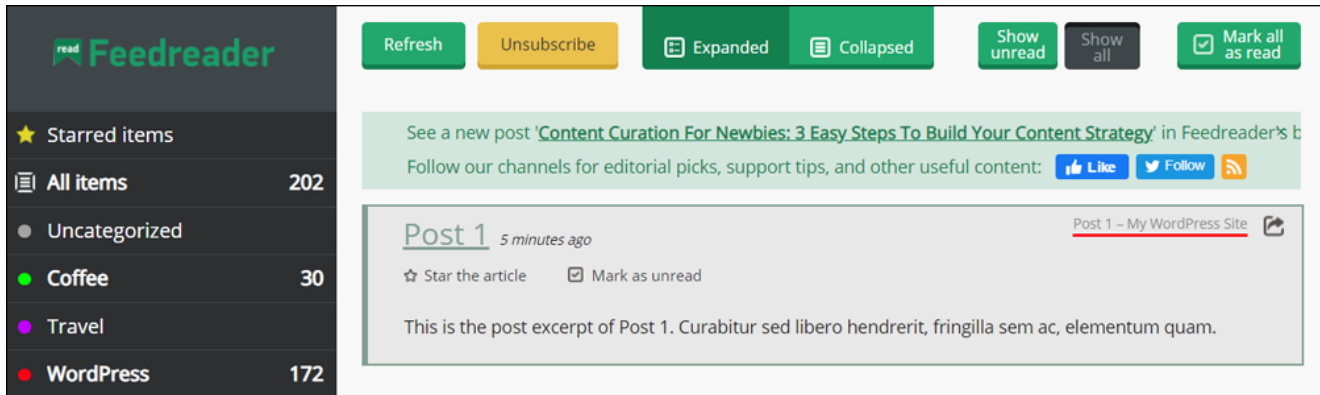

Single Post feed

About this feed
Title	Post 1 – My WordPress Site

Single post RSS feed.

Note: By default, if you only append “/feed” to the end of the post URL, WordPress will return the comments for that post, not the actual content of the post itself.

So, make sure to enter the full URL as shown earlier to view your post RSS.

View a single post in your feed.

Tip #3 – Using Post Category RSS Feeds

Some of your site visitors may not want to subscribe to or syndicate your entire site’s feed. They may only be interested in specific categories.

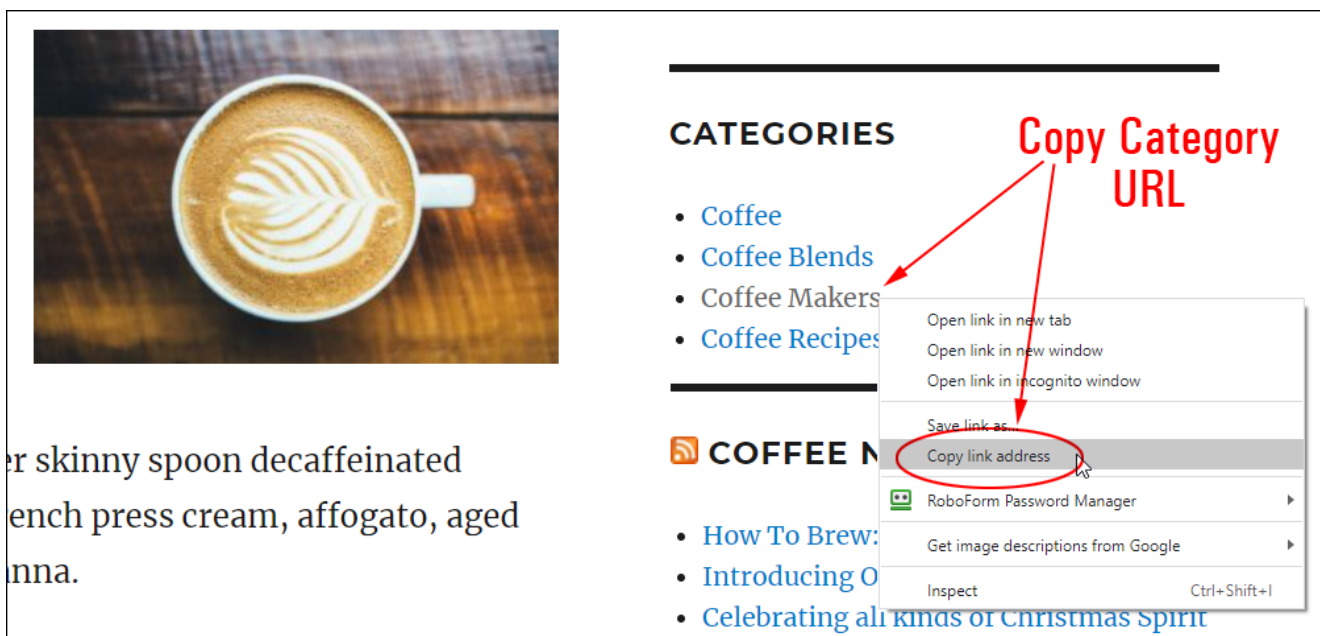

If you publish content under multiple categories, WordPress allows you to provide a separate RSS feed for each category.

All you need to do is use the format shown below:

<https://yourdomain.com/category/category-name/feed>

Use this format to view feeds for specific categories on your site.

To create a category-specific feed, first right-click on a category link and copy the URL to your clipboard.

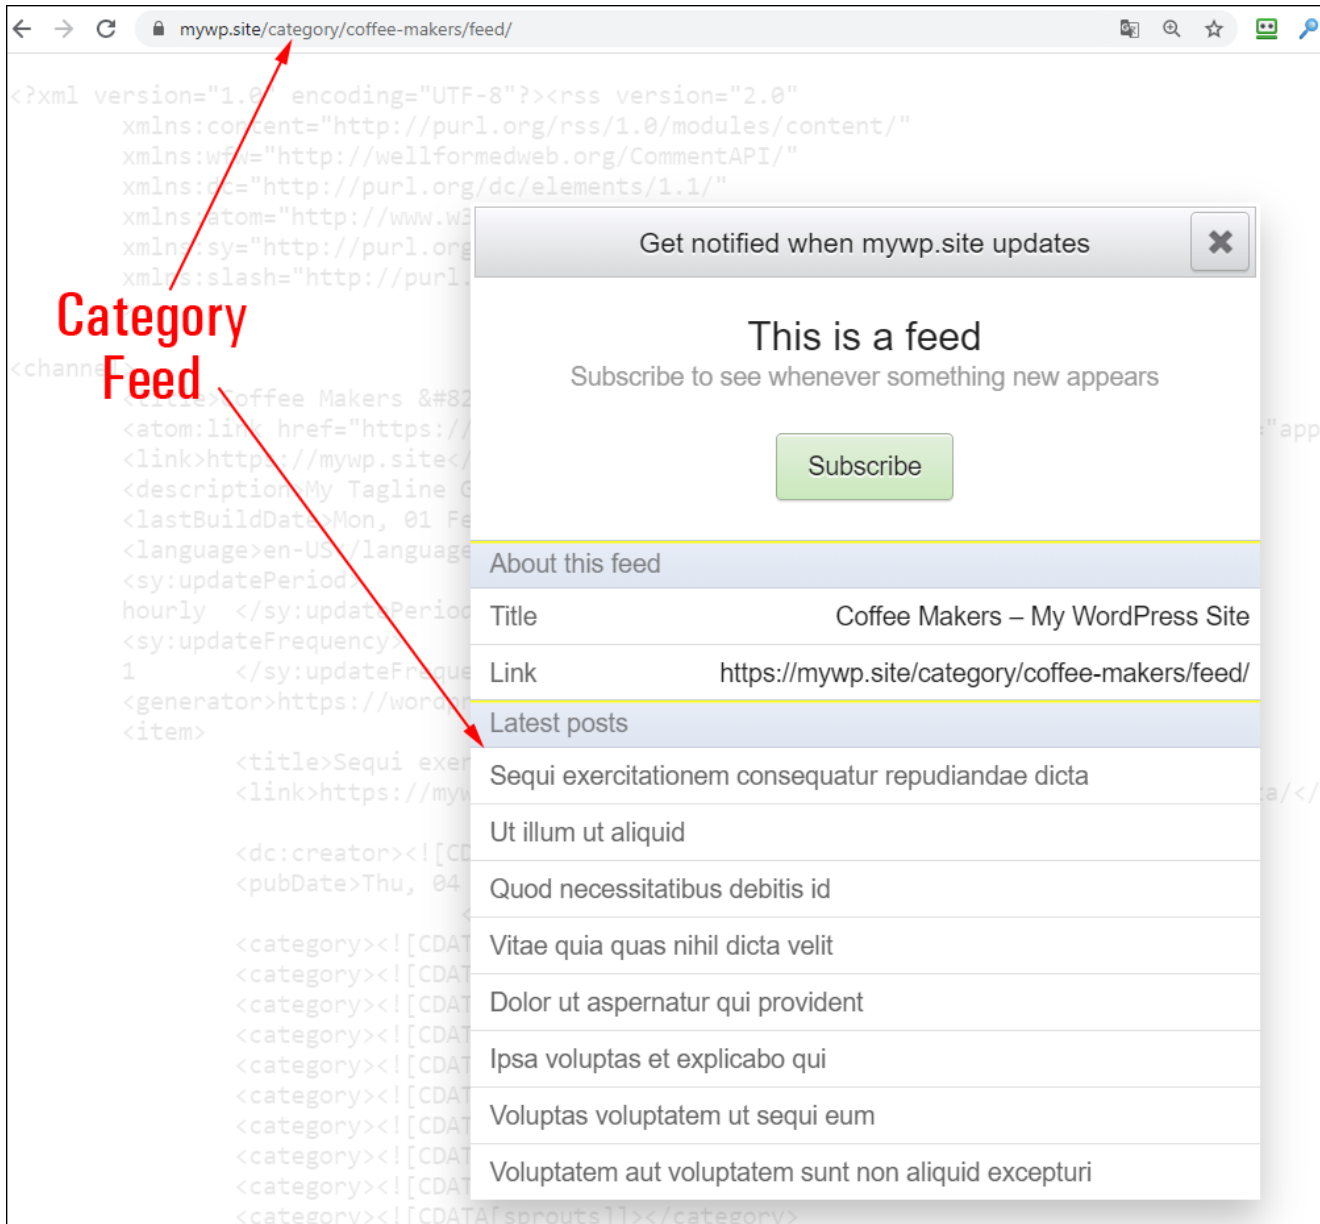

Copy the category link address to your clipboard.

Next, append the word “feed” to the end of the URL.

https://yourdomain.com/category/coffee-makers/feed

A category feed.

The category feed you’ve created will only display content assigned to that specific category.

A category-specific RSS feed.

The WordPress Codex lists different ways to create feeds. Not just for post categories, but also feeds for tags, authors, search, etc.

For example, let’s create a feed for a specific post category using the format shown below:

Categories and Tags

You can also provide feeds to only specific categories or tags on your site by adding the following to the end of the link:

http://www.example.com/?cat=42&feed=rss2
http://www.example.com/?tag=tagname&feed=rss2 http://www.example.com/category/categoryname/feed http://www.example.com/tag/tagname/feed

Post Category feed format. Source: WordPress Codex

In this example, the post category ID is '42'. We'll need to replace both the post category ID and the domain name with the ID of your category and your site's domain name.

http://www.example.com/?cat=42&feed=rss2

WordPress post category feed format.

To find the post category ID, go to Posts > Categories.

Posts – Categories menu.

Locate the post category you want to create a feed for and hover over the category title to reveal its unique ID.

Post category ID.

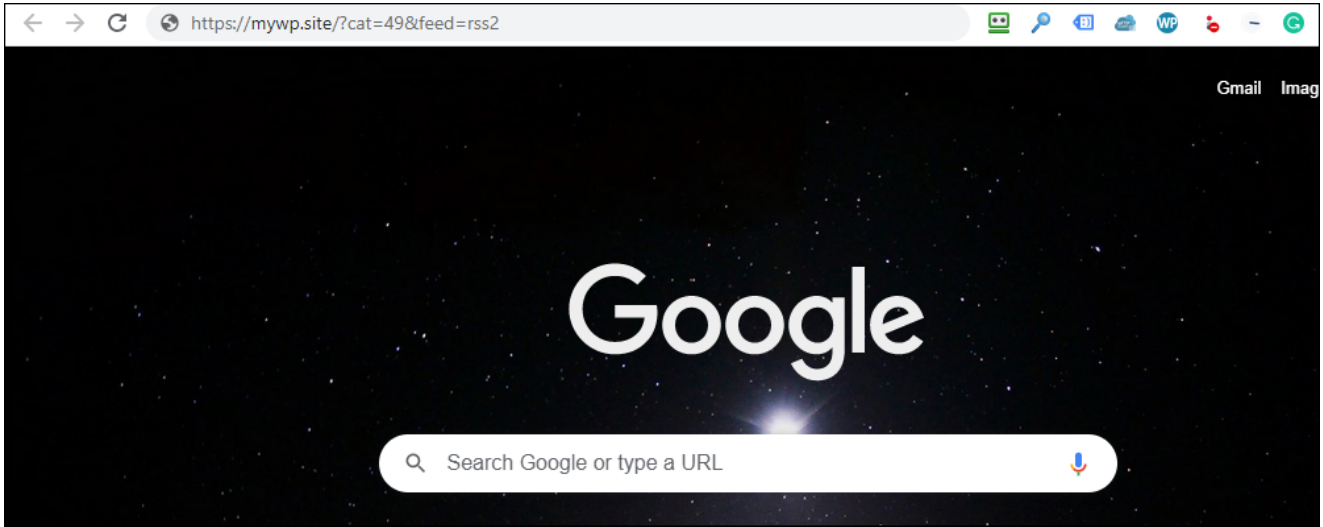

In our example, the post category ID is '49'. If you need help in this area, see our tutorial on How To Find WordPress Post And Page IDs

So, the post category feed format we'll need to use for our example looks like this.

https://mywp.site/?cat = 49&feed = rss2

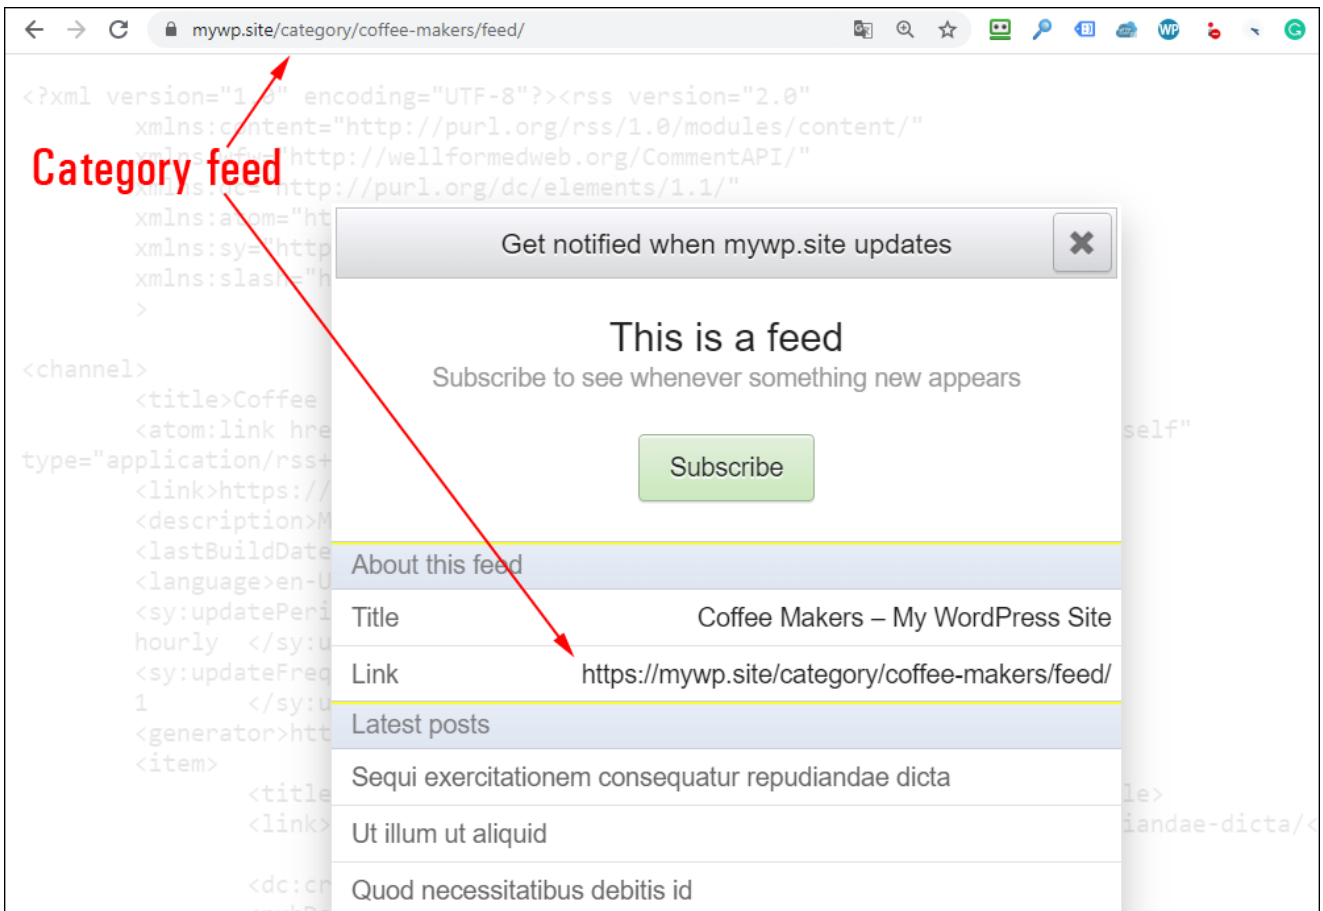

Post category feed format with domain name and ID.

Copy and paste the feed into your browser and hit enter.

Paste the feed into your web browser.

This feed will now display only a list of items filed under our selected category.

RSS feed of a specific post category.

Note that in our example, WordPress automatically converted the feed format we pasted into our web browser into the category feed URL shown below.

← → ↻ mywp.site/category/coffee-makers/feed/ Category feed
<?xml version="1.0" encoding="UTF-8"?><rss version="2.0" xmlns:content="http://purl.org/rss/1.0/modules/content/"

Post category feed format.

The simplest way to create additional feeds for other categories on your site, then, is to take your post category feed URL...

<https://mywp.site/category/coffee-makers/feed/>

Post category feed.

And change the slug to another post category...

<https://mywp.site/category/coffee-blends/feed/>

Change the post category slug to create a new category-specific feed.

Paste your new feed into your web browser and hit enter to display content specific to that category.

mywp.site/category/coffee-blends/feed/

Easily create feeds for other categories by changing the slug in the category feed URL.

Tip #4 – Set Up An RSS Feeds Directory On Your Site

Now that you know how to create RSS feeds for specific post categories (or tags, authors, etc.), you can easily create a directory or list of individual feeds for your visitors.

My Coffee Blog – RSS Directory

Subscribe to our RSS feeds below and stay up to date on all things related to coffee!

CATEGORY	SUBSCRIBE	CATEGORY LISTING
Coffee Makers		https://mycoffeeblog.com/category/coffee-makers/feed/
Coffee Blends		https://mycoffeeblog.com/category/coffee-blends/feed/
Coffee News		https://mycoffeeblog.com/category/coffee-news/feed/
Coffee Recipes		https://mycoffeeblog.com/category/coffee-recipes/feed/
Coffee Books		https://mycoffeeblog.com/category/coffee-books/feed/

Set up an RSS feeds directory on your site.

All you need to do is:

1. Create a table or list on a separate page,
2. Add your category feeds
3. Link an RSS button image like the one shown below to the URL of each category feed.

WordPress RSS – Additional Notes

RSS feeds can be customized in a number of ways, such as adding images and videos to feeds, ads, etc.

Some of these feed customizations require code editing skills. However, WordPress allows you to configure different feed formats without touching code.

Refer to the table below for examples of custom feed formats you can display on your site:

Feed Type:	Description:	Example:
All Posts	Display your latest posts.	https://example.com/feed
All Comments	Display the latest comments posted on your site.	https://example.com/comments/feed
Individual Posts	Display the latest comments made on a specific post.	https://example.com/post-title/feed
Archives - Day	Display the latest posts in each archive.	https://example.com/2021/12/31/feed
Archives - Month	Display the latest posts in each archive.	https://example.com/2021/12/feed
Archives - Year	Display the latest posts in each archive.	https://example.com/2021/feed
Search Results	Display the latest posts for a search query.	https://example.com/?s=searchterm&feed=rss2
Authors	Display the latest posts from an author.	https://example.com/author/authurname/feed/
Custom Post Type	Display the latest posts for a custom type (e.g. product)	https://example.com/feed/?post_type=product

Encourage users to subscribe to your feed.

Keep in mind that other users will only syndicate or subscribe to your content if your content is useful, educational, informative, or engaging.

Focus on providing high-quality information that will add value to other sites and benefit their visitors, and people will begin to subscribe and share more of your content online.
